Challenging, But Still Outstanding; Keep BUY

Analyst

 Keep BUY with THB220.00 TP, 26% upside. While core operations should remain challenging from cost-push margins compression, the outlook remains outstanding vis-à-vis the industry. Valuations are trading at a discount to mean (-1SD vs peers' -0.75SD), which is also relatively appealing. A FY20 DPS of THB6.92 (c.3.6% yield) was announced.

• FY20 results in line. Core earnings were line with our estimation, down 12% YoY to THB27.8bn (4Q20: +10% QoQ, +3.6% YoY), largely dampened by thinner margins pressured by prolonged stagnating data monetisation, as well as higher fixed asset costs and interest expenses that overwhelmed Advanced Info Service's cost optimisation. Core service revenue dropped 5.1% YoY despite an outstanding growth in fixed broadband (FBB, +21.6% as well as higher fixed asset costs and interest expenses that overwhelmed Advanced Info Service's cost optimisation. Core service revenue dropped 5.1% YoY despite an outstanding growth in fixed broadband (FBB, +21.6% YoY), no thanks to the toning down of mobile revenue and device sales (-6.5% QoQ, -3.9% YoY) that came amidst intense price competition.

• Total mobile subs turned back to growth, reaching 41.4m (+1.2% QoQ,

Share Performance (%)

• Total mobile subs turned back to growth, reaching 41.4m (+1.2% QoQ, -1.4% YoY), mostly on positive prepaid segment net adds (+74k) with solid pre-to-post migration (+4.3% QoQ, +12% YoY) on a value-proposition approach via bundled packages that bore fruit. Mobile blended ARPU dipped to THB234.00/month (prepaid: -1.9% QoQ, postpaid: +2.4% QoQ), mainly from the yet-to-recover tourism segment. FBB ARPU also stayed under pressure (-1.6% QoQ) from the ongoing intense competition, mainly dragged by new acquisitions that remained in lower-tier packages.

• Challenging, but still outstanding. Although the government-requested second extra-low price packages should create mild impacts to prepaid and postpaid segments – due to usage limitations that make pick up relatively small – we still see downside risks over additional measures that might be imposed if lockdowns are prolonged. While higher fixed asset costs from network expansions and new licences (coupled with the sluggish topline) should remain key short-term hurdles, the proportional rise in network assets from previous investment cycles (that are starting to fully depreciate) and a more gradual 5G roll-out should partly buffer the margins trend down. The positive momentum in terms of mobile market share, FBB and enterprise double-digit growth prospects, and lower capex (THB25-30bn from THB35-40bn) should remain key factors in bolstering 2021 earnings.

Although the potential 15-year 700MHz network infrastructure-sharing agreement with National Telecom remains in the bidding stage and may require more time till finalised, we think AIS' relatively appealing offer and favourable terms should put it in a strong position. This deal can add c.THB1.3bn pa to service revenue once finalised. We also think it can help optimise network utilisation and create longer-term bottomline upsides.

• AlS remains our sector Top Pick. Key risks: Weakening private consumption, additional economic measures urged by the Government, and intense pricing competition driven by market competition.
