Unimpressive Growth In Core Business; Stay SELL

Target Price (Return):	THB10.20 (-19%)
Price:	THB12.60
Market Cap:	USD920m
Avg Daily Turnover (THB/USD)	21.1m/0.70m

- Maintain SELL with new TP of THB10.20 from THB10.50, 19% downside. We expect stronger earnings growth from Pruksa Real Estate in FY21 from the abnormally low base in FY20. However, it should continue to remain at an unattractive single digit for a few more years as there are several negative factors weighing on its housing and newly established healthcare businesses.

- FY20 earnings fell 48% YoY at THB2.77bn, with 4Q20 net profit of THB836m (-55% YoY and QoQ). Factors behind FY20 earnings decline were i) 27% YoY decline in sales revenue, ii) GPM shrinking to 32% in FY20 from 35.4% in FY19 due to the company's pricing discount strategy to sell off its inventory as a result of intense competition, and iii) financial cost rising by 59% YoY amid slower revenue. As one of the major players in low-rise projects, we were surprised that Pruksa delivered sales revenue of -27% YoY from its single-detached housing (-25% YoY) and townhouse (-31% YoY) projects while other major low-rise project developers took the opportunity during the pandemic to boost sales.

- FY21F business plan. The company was conservative in launching new projects in FY20 – only THB15.8bn (-62% YoY) – and recorded FY20 presales value of THB22bn (-38% YoY). These were offset by the significant 41% decline in inventory balance. Based on this lower inventory, its FY21 business plan will likely be more aggressive in terms of new project launches worth THB26bn or 69% increase from the low base in FY20. 55% of new projects value will be in the townhouse segment – the company's major customer base. Pricing discount strategy should continue in FY21 in order to further diminish inventory on hand, and GPM will inevitably be pressured. In addition, Pruksa has set up FY21F presales and revenue targets that are not too lofty – at THB32bn each.

- Medical services expansion. Based on the THB4.5bn investment in starting a healthcare business under Vimut Hospital Holding Co Ltd (99% held by Pruksa), the first hospital will commence operations by May and we expect it to accrue losses for at least three years. However, the company has recently spent THB709m to acquire a 51% stake in Theptarin Hospital. This small-size hospital located at the Bangkok CBD border with >30-year history, will provide synergy with Vimut Hospital and help alleviate the business unit's losses during the early period.

- Lower earnings estimates. We cut FY21F-22F earnings by 14-14.5% due to i) sales revenue's downside risk from the condominium segment based on the high cancellation rate, which is expected to continue this year, ii) GPM at a trough level close to FY20 due to pricing pressure from the intense competition within the industry, and iii) expected losses from its healthcare business in FY21F-23F. As such, our new TP is down to THB10.20 derived from 6.8x P/E – slightly below its historical 7-year average.
