• Upgrade to BUY from Neutral, new THB25.00 TP from THB17.50, 13% upside with c.3% FY21F yield. Thai Union should see a recovery in its seafood segment, due to the reopening of the US and EU economies on top of the THB depreciation. GPM should remain robust, on better sales and manageable raw material costs. We raise our frozen product sales growth estimate, which also boosts our TP. Short-term catalysts: a strong set of 2Q21F results, and its well-diversified businesses enabling the group to have a better view of long-term consumer trends.

Expect strong 2Q21E numbers from the recovery of its frozen food segment. TU should record healthy numbers for 2Q21. Its tuna raw material cost is at USD1,280-1,350 per tonne - which is a comfortable range to manage, and contains an optimisation point between suppliers and customers. We expect 2Q21 net profit at THB1.9bn (+7% QoQ, +12% YoY), in tandem with better growth in the frozen & chilled seafood segment, as the US and EU economies are reopening, and food and dining businesses are on a recovery path. Note that the US and EU markets account for 40% and 30% of TU's revenue. TU's seafood restaurant chain Red Lobster has also done better, due to more branches being reopened and its wellmanaged operations.

| 52-wk Price lov | /high (THB |) | | 13.1 | - 23.0 |

We increase earnings forecasts due to higher demand growth. TU is likely to benefit from higher demand for its products for restaurants and food service businesses, as the US and EU economies reopen further. As such, we raise our demand growth estimate for its private-market frozen segment products to 7% (from 0%). We also raise our demand growth estimate for its branded frozen seafood products to 7%, from 2% for the same period. As such, we lift TU's 2021F net profit by 11% from our previous estimate, to THB6.8 bn (+9% YoY). In 2022-2023F, we now expect earnings to be 11-14% than our previous estimate.

Well-diversified businesses (in terms of segments and geographical reach) provide a cushion against downside risks. While the COVID-19 Delta variant may spike concerns for the short term, the US market has better confidence and experience in coping with the pandemic. Unlike their Asian counterparts, US agencies do not view this as a cause for panic at present. Even if the pandemic worsens, people will try to stockpile their own food supplies. TU has ample stocks of high-margin ambient food products. in times of social distancing - these provide a sturdy cushion and have low downside risks. In the longer term, it is looking to expand the exposure of its value-added products (alternative proteins, supplements, and healthcare products), and invest in automation to support margin enhancement. _:_4:_.
