- Maintain SELL with DCF-based THB30 TP from THB27, 21% downside and 1% dividend yield. Although TOA enjoyed cost-side benefits during FY19, we expect that these benefits will not last for long and, in the worst case, could turn into negative factors due to different circumstances between FY19 and FY20. Limited earnings growth in FY20F coupled with highly demanding share price supports the major rationale behind our SELL rating.

- FY19 benefiting from stronger GPM. We expect sales revenue growth will not be able to achieve the FY19 target of +10% YoY due to domestic economy concerns, although management had previously been confident over its success in restructuring the sales team, emphasising the modern trade channel and promotions via below-the-line marketing events. We maintain our FY19F sales revenue growth of 5.5% YoY. Thailand remained the top contributor at >80% of overall sale revenue, followed by Vietnam. Positive factors were the appreciation of THB against USD during the year and declining trend of global oil price. Both factors resulted in lower raw material prices, especially for titanium dioxide (30% of production cost). As such, we fine-tune our FY19F GPM from 34.1% to 34.9%, resulting in upward revision of FY19F net profit by 8% to THB2.15bn (+18% YoY). 4Q19 earnings should increase 14% YoY to THB500m.

- Not so easy task in FY20. After enjoying cost benefits in FY19, we expect TOA to face growth challenges in FY20 due to:

- its three new production lines in Indonesia, Myanmar, and Cambodia seeing earnings losses, hit by slow sale revenue growth momentum and total depreciation expenses of THB200m/year, based on management's expectation for its foreign business earnings to turn to profit within 3-5 years after operations commencement;
- Thailand's low GDP growth expected in FY20, plus a more serious drought situation in the highly populated north and northeastern regions;
- sharp appreciation of the THB against the USD favouring raw material costs unlikely to occur in FY20; and
- political tension between US and Iran impacting global oil prices.

Based on these factors that would limit sales revenue growth and dampen profit margins, we expect net profit growth of only 4% YoY in FY20 and 6% YoY in FY21.

- P/E too demanding. As we expect TOA's growth upside to be more difficult, its P/E may be too demanding and exaggerated at c.34x for FY20, compared to 10-15x P/E for other pure-play peers in the building materials sector with large business exposure in Thailand.

- Upside risks: Faster-than-expected turnaround in earnings from newly established overseas production lines and lower-than-expected raw material costs.
